

YouTube and Video Creation Resources

As you know, our way of delivering our speeches this semester is through Youtube. This means you will need to create an account, prepare, rehearse and record a video, and post it on the DBQ in the appropriate time as indicated on the weekly menu schedule. Let's make sure our first order of business in the class is to comprehend this expectation totally, so there are NO technical issues in the learning process. Make sense?

Therefore, here are a number of resources for common startup, recording, and posting requirements. Perhaps obvious, in order for you to succeed in the class, you will need access to the internet, a computer/smart phone to record your video, and a working unlisted Youtube account; also, you'll want to allow time to prepare and rehearse your speeches.

I've assembled the following resources to get you on your way:

Some Tips for Recording Your Speech: Recording tips.

The recording tips video is helpful for selecting a location, setting, as well as the approach for filming, and attire. Pay particular attention to the segments 3-7. It's very important that your peers and I are able to see and hear you clearly. Body language, eye contact (or the idea of it), and your general affect are all part of how we communicate ideas and messages to people, even in a digital environment. Whether it's a laptop, tripod camera, or phone, make sure your video is not shaky and we can see the upper ½ of your body.
